THE BLACK LIST upon which the men who were not regular about paying their dinner calls were placed, seems to have been done away with and now young men are invited to function after function without the return of a single courtesy.

Part of the blame for this may be laid upon the business woman who is in society, but the greatest share on the shoulders of the man himself. The business woman does not always like to be bothered with these "party calls" after she has given a large reception, and so the other hostesses have taken it for granted that the men have done away with the old custom.

There are still a few, however, who religiously pay their dinner calls within the two weeks and they are usually favorites among the hostesses. After a woman has spent many hours planning some novel entertainment for her guests or has gone to much expense and care in arranging some new delicacies for the dinner, she gets little pleasure out of the affair herself. For though a guest may express his appreciation many times in words no reward extends the little courtesy of calling upon her later.

A woman may entertain a man any number of times and naturally not expect him to pay back the obligation by calling, but he might at Christmas or almost any anniversary send her a box of flowers or a book. These little attentions are appreciated beyond words. This is really about the only way in which a man can return the favor shown him by a hostess.

Oftentimes when the hostess is a young girl a gentleman may ask her to accompany him to the theater or movies. After he has done this he seems to forget that she still lives in the same town and never goes near her again. This little courtesy often causes a girl when she is making out for the next dance. She does not know whether the man has lost regard for her or whether the act is just neglect. Consequently he will not be invited to the affair.

The majority of men who do not pay their social obligations usually give as their excuse that it is too much trouble to dress up and that it is more comfortable to go home. Many men say that they prefer taking a girl out to dining on her and naturally they expect the same for a hostess who is married. The getting ready for this may be a little trouble, but does not take much longer than time for a dinner or entertainment in which most of the young men regularly present themselves.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Castle Entertain.

The one large affair of the week when the interest of society has been centered was the dance at which Mr. and Mrs. Harold Castle entertained their friends last evening at the James B. Castle home, Kaimana. The interior of the residence was magnificently decorated that other decorations are hardly needed and aside from flowers sent by friends there were no natural embellishments. The colors worn by the ladies were exquisitely in their loveliness and many of the society matrons wore handsome hats.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Along, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Castle, Mr. and Mrs. Northrup Castle, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. Montague Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Cartwright, Jr., Miss Alice Corbett, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dillingham, Miss May Damon, Mr. and Mrs. George Davies, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dowsett, Mr. and Mrs. John Erdman, Miss Emily Farley, Mr. and Mrs. H. Mrs. Gertrude Damon Becomes the Bride of Mr. Henry Damon.

The wedding of the week which has been of interest to local society was that of Mrs. Gertrude Damon and Mr. Henry Damon. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride at Mcanalua at four o'clock on Thursday afternoon. The wedding ceremony was read by the Rev. Henry H. Parker, who stood with the bridal party on the lanai, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion with tropical palms and ferns.

The bride wore a gown of heavily embroidered white mull and a white portrait hat adorned with ostrich plumes. She was attended by her two little daughters, Esme and Heather Damon. Miss Esme wore a dainty white dress trimmed with pink and she carried pink roses. Miss Heather wore a similar frock trimmed with blue and she carried a basket of blue forget-me-nots.

After the ceremony a wedding supper was served at which the bridal couple and relatives were present. The rooms were beautifully decorated with a profusion of roses sent by friends.
